Public health and medical (EF-8) Situation Report

Ebola Virus Disease, 2014

Date of report: October 14, 2014

Operational period: October 13 - October 17, 2014

There are currently no suspected or confirmed cases of Ebola in California. A patient in Los Angeles County was confirmed negative for Ebola Virus Disease (EVD), on October 9, and is being monitored until October 30 as a precaution. At present, the weekly situational assessment for the risk of Ebola infection in California is very low.

The outbreak of EVD in the West African nations of Guinea, Sierra Leone, and Liberia continues to expand but does not pose a significant risk to the United States. As of October 10, the World Health Organization has reported a cumulative total of 8399 suspect, probable, and confirmed cases and 4033 deaths. Based on the current situation in West Africa, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) consider the risk of importation of multiple cases of EVD into the United States to be very low. However, the outbreak is evolving, and this assessment may change.

A patient with confirmed EVD, diagnosed on September 30, 2014, in Dallas, Texas died on October 8, 2014. This was the first travel-related case detected outside of West Africa's outbreak region. One of the nurses that cared for the patient was diagnosed with EVD in Dallas, Texas on October 12, 2014 and is being treated.

The CDC, California Department of Public Health (CDPH), and Emergency Medical Services Authority (EMSA) continue to prepare for the potentiality that a traveler returning to California from West Africa may be infected with Ebola virus. These persons may develop illnesses and require medical evaluation. CDPH and local health jurisdictions are monitoring the situation closely and taking steps to keep the public safe. CDPH continues to direct healthcare providers to follow protocols established by the CDC about how to detect and isolate patients who may have Ebola and how they can protect themselves from infection.

CDPH continues to work with the healthcare community and local health jurisdictions to identify potential suspect cases and avoid spread of the disease. New guidelines and updated guidelines released by CDC are posted on the CDPH Communicable Diseases Emergency Response (CDER) website available at: (<http://cdph.ca.gov/programs/cder/Pages/Ebola.aspx>). Likewise, EMSA has developed guidelines for Emergency Medical Services (EMS) personnel based on the recommendations of CDC. The guidelines have been distributed to Local Emergency Management Services Agency (LEMSA) Administrators, LEMSAs Medical Directors and the Regional Disaster Medical Health Coordination (RDMHC) Program. Revisions will be made as necessary. The document is posted on EMSA's website at http://www.emsa.ca.gov/ebola\_control.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA:

The first in a series of low pressure troughs will move ashore today. Some rain will develop over the northwest coast and mountains by midday and spread inland overnight as the trough moves east. Ahead of this system, low humidity and strong southerly winds are expected this afternoon and overnight. The strongest winds today and tonight will be over Siskiyou and Modoc counties, south along the rest of the Cascade/Sierra Crest and eastward where sustained speeds will become mostly 10-22 mph with the strongest gusts 35-45 mph, but locally stronger winds are possible. Afternoon maximum temperatures will be right around 10 degrees below the seasonal norm through Friday in many areas. Snow levels will drop to around 6000 feet in the north (+/- 500 feet) to around 7500-8000 feet in the south with this system later tonight. There will be a break in between systems Wednesday night through Thursday, but humidity will remain relatively high. Another weather system will move onshore late in the week with more precipitation in many areas and somewhat warmer temperatures. Yet another weather system is expected around Sunday night and Monday after some drier weather late Saturday and daytime Sunday.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Cooler and more humid weather can be expected during the second half of the week as a series of troughs move through the northern part of the state. The first system will push through the Pacific Northwest this evening which may lead to very light rain occurring over Monterey County and in the Sierra's from Yosemite National Park northward tonight. Rainfall will be under a quarter of an inch before the precipitation decreases by Wednesday afternoon. The marine layer will deepen tonight which may allow for some drizzle to occur over much of the coastal and interior valleys of southern California Wednesday morning. Temperatures today and Wednesday will be significantly cooler with highs ranging from the upper 60s along the coast to around 80 in the warmest interior valleys. Gusty southwest winds will occur over many areas today. The strongest winds today will be across the northern portions of the Owens Valley into Mono County where wind gusts to 40 mph will be possible this afternoon. Other areas, including northern Los Angeles County, the Kern County Mountains and higher elevations of the Angeles and San Bernardino National Forest will see winds of 15-30 mph this afternoon. Wednesday, expect west winds up to 40 mph in the Banning Pass and portions of the Cleveland National Forest. Another system may brush the northern part of the area Friday night into Saturday morning, bringing very light rain to the Central Coast and the Sierras north of Yosemite National Park. Look for sunnier and warmer weather Sunday and Monday. Some gusty north winds may follow the passage of yet another trough next Tuesday, but at this time, no strong offshore winds are expected the next 7 days.
